Request:

Question 1: Regarding question 3 the original response referred to achieving “direct contact on a referral” and then defined this to include “...appointment with child / young person OR family [emphasis added]”. When seeking clarification on 3 April, I asked “From what has been written here, do I understand correctly that the service could potentially stop the waiting times clock solely due to a phone call with a family member?”. The response did not answer this question. Is this a Yes or No?

Answer: No.

What stops the clock is an achieved direct contact with the young person, parents or carer of the young person, which could be through face-to-face or video. The direct contact has to be clinically meaningful and relevant. This means that direct contact would cover factors such as symptoms and experiences, feeling, thoughts, actions, physical health and wellbeing, treatment and care etc. At initial assessment (face to face) a full history is taken, physical health examination including vitals, ECG. Bloods, risk assessment completed and initial care plan and treatment commenced as needed.

Question 2: Regarding question 4, in your response you state: “The data provided relates to the time between referral receipt and the first assessment appointment.” This is not what the question asked for.

Question 4 asked for the median and mean gaps between the date when the service stops the treatment waiting times clock (see questions 1-3), and the “subsequent individual or single family (not group) treatment appointment”. Judging from your answers to questions 1-3 in your case this would presumably refer to the gap between assessment appointment and the start of treatment. The principle behind this question is that it would mean little to patients and their families if they can access treatment quickly but then face a shadow waiting list of several weeks or months before they are seen again. Collecting data of this kind is recommended in the national guidance (see ‘Contextual measures’ on page 16).

Answer: The data provided states that it is the “Waiting time from clock reset date to second appointment”. This means that it is the median and mean gaps between the clock reset contact and the second face-to-face contact.

We promise to work together creatively to: learn ‘what matters’ to everyone, achieve a better quality of life and continuously improve our services.
